

SERVING THOSE WHO SERVED: VETERANS LAW CLINIC

Army Veteran and Professor Stephen J. Valentine has a clear understanding of his mission every day. His mission is to serve. Director of the Veteran's Law Clinic, a collaboration between NC Central University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Professor Valentine teaches students how to become skilled in the veterans claims adjudication process. Through a grant from the North Carolina General Assembly, the partnership supports the universities' joint effort in assisting active military personnel, veterans and their families who might otherwise not be able to afford proper representation. Active military personnel and veterans have a large presence in North Carolina which is home to several major military bases and stations throughout the state. The Veterans Clinic handles benefit claims in various stages of appeals. Cases revolve around disability claims, survivors' benefits, pension and other important and urgent issues facing veterans. Veterans seeking help from the legal clinic must be willing to allow students to participate in the preparation of briefs and the administration of the case from adjudication to the U.S. Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims. Additionally, NCCU School of Law operates specialty clinics in eight other areas, civil litigation, criminal defense, family law, intellectual property (patent and trademark), juvenile law, pro bono, tax law and consumer issues. Services are free to those who qualify or who are able to meet the financial eligibility standards as determined by the appropriate legal standards.

STUDENT ORGANIZATION SPOTLIGHT

Military and Veterans Law Student Society

The newly established Military and Veterans Law Student Society was created to help students who are interested in pursuing a legal career in the armed forces and for those committed to advocating for veterans and their families.

The organization also focuses on raising awareness about issues surrounding the military community. Alyssa Sanchez (pictured) is excited to lead this charge. Sanchez, a third year law student serves as president along with founding members: Lachlan McKinion, vice president; Michael Griddine Jr., treasurer; and Brittany Reaves, secretary who all make up the executive board. In spring 2022, the organization plans to host its first military law panel to address urgent issues impacting veterans and their families. The organization also plans to host an event recognizing active military and veteran law student service members. Sanchez hopes the organization will also help encourage students to participate in moot court competitions.

On November 6 & 7, Sanchez and McKinion will participate in their first National Veterans Law Moot Court Competition supervised by Professor Stephen Valentine. The competition is sponsored by George Washington University and the U.S. Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims. Due to Covid-19, the first several rounds of the competition will be virtual with an opportunity to advance to the finals in Washington, D.C.

MENTORSHIP MATTERS

On October 20, the Student Bar Association (SBA) hosted a mentor-mentee social. The purpose of this event was to provide an opportunity for mentors (2Ls and 3Ls) and mentees (1Ls) to meet face-to-face and discuss their academic and personal goals for the year. They also collaborated to create a tangible action plan to help ensure the success of their goals.

HAPPY THANKSGIVING
