What's New in the Nest?

Virtual Week is here as we head toward the middle of October. With midterms and assessments over, we hope you were able to use your three-day weekend to rest, study or simply regroup.

Make sure to refocus your efforts on your career path and plan ahead what you want to do next. 1Ls and 1LEs, we will be reaching out to you in the coming weeks. The calendar of events is on page 4. All other students, if you haven't met with one of us here in the office, please contact us so we can help you with your goals.

The Dell Technologies Legal Diversity Scholarship Application link to the form is fixed in Symplicity. Many thanks to the students who let us know!

Office Hours Changing Tuesdays

The NCCU School of Law CSO practices an open-door policy. We are here 5 days a week from 8:30 am to 5:30 p.m. On Tuesdays we stay open until 7 pm for our evening students or others who may need to make an appointment after-hours.

Tips On Your Career Search

*Sandra English,
Assistant Dean of Career Services and Professional Development*

Most students find positions for employment (summer or full-time) by being proactive. This can be time-consuming but it will pay off. Our Career Services Office can assist with helping you identify and contact potential employers, provide information to conduct informational interviews and assist with helping you market yourself to employers.

Do your research! Treat your employment search like a class. Begin your search and develop substantive questions, then make an appointment with a career services representative and professors who have experience in that field.

We stress for you to attend information sessions, career panels and workshops that will enhance your career search and build your professional network.

Career Services Staff

Social Media and Your Career

Social media is ubiquitous throughout the country, particularly in light of many formerly in-person events and careers shifting to the virtual arena last year.

Whether you press like for your favorite TikTok post or upvote a comment on Reddit, at least someone in the world will see that interaction. And social media can be helpful for a law student who wants to engage and learn more.

There are platforms that are more commonly used in the professional world.

Most common are LinkedIn, Twitter, Facebook, and Instagram. Whether you post or not, make sure to see what social media thumbprint a potential employer is leaving before you apply. The organization's culture may be clearer to you when you do so.

If you can search potential employers, they may be searching your social media accounts. This can work in your favor. Here is how:

LinkedIn: LinkedIn is the world's largest professional network. Employers will look for your profile on this platform. We encourage you to have an up-to-date LinkedIn account to assist you in networking throughout your career. If you have a robust profile, LinkedIn can sometimes provide you suggestions as to places where you can apply. Many employers have pages where you can see more about their employees as well as job openings.

Twitter: Twitter allows you to update your network with short headlines about your work and issues of interest. Simply following some organizations or attorneys who are seasoned in their field can help you to be cognizant of the latest news in narrow areas of your interest. Interacting with these tweets can help you build rapport with others in your area of practice.

Facebook: Use Facebook professionally by joining groups or liking pages to keep up with the latest news. For instance, many larger bar associations have Facebook pages that you can follow and meet other law students and attorneys interested in the same fields of law.

Instagram: If you are a visual person, Instagram may be a platform you can use professionally. Focus on 'how' your law school experience is transpiring rather than 'what' you do as a student to create interesting content.

No matter what platform you choose, remember that your audience includes potential employers and clients. Feel free to follow us to find out the latest news from our office.
